STO-Investment: «Become a healthbank Owner»

As off now, investment in the first Security Token Offering (STO) and thus in the equity of a Swiss cooperative is possible - an investment in the world's first citizen-owned health data platform, which wants to give control over health data into the hands of people.

Despite its size, healthbank can already look back on more than five years of market testing, a highly experienced team and sales figures such as registered platform users. "For investors, a commitment to healthbank is an ethical and sustainable contribution to the further growth of the world's most important platform for health data. Including the pre-sale phase, healthbank has already collected over CHF 5.7 million," explains Reto Schegg, CEO of healthbank. "With our expertise in IT and healthcare, we are building the leading data hub of the next generation in healthcare.

COO/CFO of healthbank, Karsten Stampa, adds: "An investment not only brings an investor financial returns, but you become part of an important global footprint. While healthbank's goals may seem ambitious, they are the logical response to a global challenge - to keep and store health data secure, protected and compliant.

Further information about the company and the Token Sale whitepaper, can be found at www.healthbank.info. You can invest directly at <https://healthbank.info/register.html>.

About healthbank

healthbank is the world's first people-owned, neutral and independent health data transaction platform that enables people to share their data with other partners in a secure and privacy-compliant manner. healthbank connects data sources of all kinds from the entire health sector and rewards participants for sharing their health data for research purposes. Based in Switzerland, healthbank stands for Swiss neutrality, trust and data protection and enables participating citizens, researchers and organisations with large amounts of data to network with each other. This enables the value of health and medical data to be optimally exploited on this independent, global health platform. healthbank promotes innovations in health care, from prevention to cure, at a more reasonable price and better quality for the benefit of the individual and society.
